Her simple view of life and its comforts, by which she had tried to chear him, was only like a report of unknown objects, which his imagination could not fashion. The fountains ohuman leve and divine faith had not yet been unlocked, and his soul was still the shrunker rivulet, with only this difference, that its little groove of sand was blocked up, and it wandered confusedly against dark obstruction.

confusedly against dark obstruction.

And so, not with anding the honest persussions of Mr. Meey and Dally Winthrop, Silar spent his Caristmas day in loneliness, eating his meat in sadness of heart, though the meat and meat in sachess of heart, though the meat had come to him as a neighborly present. In the morning he leoked out on the bla k frost that seemed to press cruelly on every blade of grass, while the half-icy red p of shivered under the bitter wind; but towards evening the snow began to fall, and curtained from him even that deary look, shutting him close up with heartener or if.

And be sat in his robbed home through the tivelong evening, not caring to close his shut-ters or lock his door, pressing his head between his hands and meaning, till the cold grasped him and told him that his fire was evey. Notody in this world but himself knew that he was the same Silas Marner who had once loved his fellow with ten ber love, and trused in an unseen goodness. Even to himself that past experience had become dim.

At Squire Cass's family party that day no ody met tioned Duns an—nobody was sorr for his absence, or feared that it would be too

"Dunsey will be crining home soon: there will be a great blow up, and now will you bribe his spite to eilence" said Anxie y.

"Oh, he won't come home before New Year'Eve, perhaps," said Godfr-y, and I shall sit by Nanev then, and dance with har, and get a kind look from her in spite of herself.

"But money is waved in snother quarter," said Anxiety, in a louder voice, "and how will you get it wi hout selling your mother's diamond pin? And if you don't get it——?"

"Well, but something may happen to make

"Yes, and suppose your fa her should bring matters to a pass that will oblige you to decline "Hold your on gue, and don't worry ma! can see Nancy's even just as they will look a me, and feel her hand in mine already."

But Anxiety went on in noisy Coristmas company; refusing to be utterly quisted even by much dricking.

CHAPTER XI. CRAPTER XI.

Places of honor had been kept for the MisLammeters near the head of the principal teatable in the wainscored parlor now looking fresh and pleasant with bandsome branches of holly, yew, and laurel, from the abundant growths of the eld garden; and Nancy felt an inward flutter, that no firmness of purpose could prevent, when she saw Mr. Godfrer Cass advancing to lead her to a seat between himself and Mr. Crackentherp, while her sister Priscills was called to the opposite side between her fa ther and the Squire. It certainly did make ther and the Squire. It certainly did makesome difference to Nance that the lover she und some difference to Nancy that the lover she and given up was the young man of quite the highest consequence in the parish—at home in a venerable and unique parlor, which was the ex remity of grandeur in the rexperience, a parlor where she might one day have been mis ress, with the cebaciousness that she was spoken of as "Madam Cans," the Squire's wife. These circumstances realized has invent of remaining the reverse and exalted her inward grams in her own eyes, and despened the emphasis with which she declared to herealf that not the most cazzling rank should nduce her to marry a man whose conduct show or him careless of his character, but that "love ones, love always," was the mot oof a true and pure woman, and no man should ever have any right over her which would be a call on her to stroy the dried flowers that she treasured and always would treasure for Godfrey Cass

And Nancy was capable of keeping her word to herself under very trying conditions. Nothing but a becoming blush betrayed the moving thoughts that urged themselves upon her as she accepted the seat next to Mr. Crackenthorp; for she was so instinctively neat and adroit in all her actions, and her pretty lips met each other with such quiet firmness, that it would have been difficult for her to appear agitated.

CHAPTER XII.

While Godfrey Cass was taking draughts of forgetfulness from the sweet presence of Nancz, willingly lesing all sense of that hidden bond which at other moments galled and fretted him so as to mingle irritation with the very sunshine, Godfrey's wife was walking, with slow mnoertain steps through the snow covered Raveice lanes, carrying her child in her arms.

This journey on New Year's Eve was a premedita ed act of vendeance which the had kep in her heart ever since Godfrey, in a fit of passion, had told her that he would seen r die than acknowledge her as his wife. There would be a great party on New Year's eve, she know; her has and would be smiting and smilled upon. has mad would be smiling and smiled upon.

Molly knew that the cause of her dirgy rags was not ber husband's neglect, but the demos Opiom to whom she wa enslayed, body and soul, except in the linger ing mother's tenderness that refused to give him her hungry child.

She knew this well; and yet, in the moments of wretched unbenumbed consciousness, the sense of her want and degradation transformed itself continually into bitterness towards God-

He was well off; and if she had her rights she would be well off too. The belief that he repented his marriage, and suffered from it, only aggravated her vindictiveness. Just and self-reproving thoughts do not come to us too thickly, even in the purest air, and with the best lesses of heaven and earth; how should the white winged delicate mesengers make their way to Molly's poisoned channer, inha sited to no higher memories than those of a par-maid. wadise of pink ribbons, and the gentlemen's

She had set out at an early hour, but had lin-gered on the road, inclined by her indelence to believe that if she waited under a warm shed the snow would cease to fall. Sie had waterd longer than she knew, and now that she found herself belated in the snow-hidden ruggadness of the long lanes, even the animation of a vin-dictive purpose could not keep her spiri from

It was seven o'clook, and by this time sho was not very far from Raveloe, but she was not familiar enough with those monotonous lanes to know how near she was her journey's end. She needed comfort, and she knew but one comfortmeeded comfort, and she knew but one comforter—the familiar demon in her bosom; but she hesitated a moment, after drawing out the black remnant, before the raised it to her lips. In that moment the mother's love pleaded for pain fal consciousness rather than oblivien—pleaded to be left in aching weariness, rather than to have the encircling arms benumbed, so that they could not feel the dear burcen. In another moment Molly had flung something away, but it was not the black remnant—it was accumpty phial. And she walked on under the breaking cloude, from which there came now and then the light of a quickly veiled star, for a freezing wind had sprung up since the snow fing had ceased. But she walked always more and more drowsily and clutched more and more and more drowsily and clutched more and more and more drowsily and clutched more and more automatically to the skepping child at her beson. Slowly the demen was working his will, and cold and weariness were his helpers. Soon she felt nothing but a supreme immediate longing that curtained off all futurity—the longing to lie down and sleep. She had arrived at a spot where her footsteps were no longer checked by a hedgerow, and she had wandered vaguely, mable to distinguish any objects, not withstanding the wide whiteness around her, and the growing starlight. She sank down against a straggling furze bush, an easy pillow enough; and the field of snow, too, was soft. She did not feel that the bed was cold, and did not heed whether the child would wake and cry for her. But her arms did not yet relax their instinctive clutch; and the little one slumbered on asgently as if it had been rocked in a lace-trimmed cradie.

But the complete torper came at last; the fingers lost their tension, the arms unboat; then the little head fell away from the bosom, and the blue eyes opened wide on the cold star-

THE FLORENCE EIGHTINGALE OF THE NURSERY,

The following is an extract from a letter written by the Rev. C. Weizer, to the German Reformed Measenger, at Chambersburg, Penn. :

A BENEFACTRESS.

There is a woman in the publicare, whose name had all along been associated, in our mind, with the "Yankee," 'Quack," and "Humbug." But it is so no onger, and we desire to wrest her name from all such suspicions association in all other minds. Whatever notions we may have of womanly delicacy and propri ety, we will all admit that woman alone is the Nurse. the good Nurse—the past Nurse. Whether we shall have Female Physicians or not, is a question which must be decided by time and principle, and not as matter of tasts. Pride, prejudice, caprice and customs may as well behave themselves, for if there is really a want, there will also be a supply—if there be "a callor," there will be a coming. Nature and Human Sci ciety are always self-supplying, and though Art and Fashion may hinder, they cannot prevent,

Mrs. Winslew does not want to treat you, gentleand Nor does she prescribe a regimen for your wives; but modestly appears as a messenger of health and appinges to your INFANTS in the cradie. Is there any hing improper in that? A Nurse of "ten years" expe-ience can boidly say what is or is not good for a babe -and ought to be fixtened to. God speed her on he cumble but happy mission! She is the most successful physician and most effectual benefact ressous little ne ever spored her doting parents not excepted Just open the door for her, and Mrs. Winslow will prove the American Florence Nightingale of the nursery. Of this we are sure that we will teach our "Scav" to say, "A BLESING ON MRS, WINSLOW"—for helping her to survive and escape the griping, colicing and teething slege. We confirm every word set to the Description. forth in the Preservorus. It performs precisely what it professes to perform, every part of it nothing less Away with your "Cordial," "Paregoric," "Drops," "Laudanum," and every other "Narcotic" by which the base is drugged into stupidity, and rendered dull and idiotic for life.

We have never seen Mrs. Winslow know her only through the preparation of her "Southing Syrup for Children Teething." If we had the power, we would make her, as she is, a physical saviour to the Infant

A PERFECT CHARM. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP certainly toes, as the name implies, ' soothe" the little sufferer into a quiet, natural sleep, from which it awakes to vigorated and retreshed. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP Are all the mo there who read the Freeman acquainted with this arts cle, which we have advertised for the last few months. We would by no means recommend any kind of medicine which, we did not know to be good—particularly for infants. But of this Syrup we can speak from knowledge; in our own family it has proved a blessing indeed by giving an infan troubled with cells retired. deed, by giving an infan troubled with colic pai quiet sleep, and its parents unbroken rest at night Most parents can appreciate these blessings. We are entirely opposed to the prevalent practice of druggin, infants, and would sooner lose our night's rest than consent to such a course. But here is an article which works to perfection, and which is harmless; for the deep which it affords the infant is perfectly natural and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button."

And during the process of techning its value is incalculable. We have frequently heard mothers say they would not be without it from the birth of the child till it had finished with the teething slege, on any considerations whatever.

We have spoken of this Syrup for the ber readers who are parents. We know its good value, and have experienced some of the rich blewings which re-sult from its use. Mrs. Winslow is no quack, but a woman of long experience as a nurse and Female Physi
